Hanging a Hammock.

The general idea is that hammocks are only for the wealthy, the "stylish," or for professional time-killers. It is a great mistake. Every well-to-do farmer—every owner of a cosy village home—every member of a city stay-at-home club, who commands a spot big enough to swing one—should have a hammock. A very good one may be bought for $1 50 to $4$, or as much higher as you may choose to go. It should be hung where there is a good afternoon shade, and if intended in part for children's use, so low that small children can get into it by the aid of a box or low stool, and over soft ground, so that the numerous tumbles that are probable will be harmless. If no other place is available, it may be hung between the handle, about an inch from a loop three or four inches is available, it may be hung between the handle, about an inch from a loop three or four inches is available, it may be hung between the handle, about an inch for the older people who use it, but undesirable for children, on account of the lack of a soft turf, as well as for the voungsters. When children only are to use the hammock. The manner of Call, alady a "chicken," and in the to one which ascenments its use by the youngsters. When children only are to use the hammock. The manner of Call, alady a "chicken," and into to one when stoppling to pick up articles and while sweeping. This results in bent and broken splinters and a worthless brown. When a new broom is purchased.

If should be hung where there is a good afternoon shade, and if intended in part for children's use, so low that small children can get into it by the aid of a box or low stool, and over soft ground, so that the numerous tumbles that are probable will be harmless. If no other place is available, it may be hung between the hammock are probable will be harmless. If no other place is available, it may be hung between the hammock are probable will be harmless. If no other place is a solid prover a way for hanging the provided and the part of the handle and the part of but undesirable for children, on account of the lack of a soft turf, as well as for the noise which accompanies its use by the youngsters. When children only are to use the hammock, the manner of hanging is not important, but if provided for the use of grown persons it should then be so uspended that the head will always be considerably higher than the feet, and much of the comfort of the one who uses it depends upon a proper observance of this fact. If you have no anitable place, suspend it from the columns of a verandah. The hook which supports the head and should be six and one-fourth feet from the floor; and that for the foot end three and three-fourthis feet, and these proportions should be observed wherever it may be hung, to secure the most desirable curve for the use of the occupant. Another point to be observed; the head end should be fastened to the hook by a rope less than a foot long. This gives the greatest freedom for swinging the lower part of the body while the head moves but little. This is a point which cannot be observed in the hammock for children, who think more of it as a swing than as a place for comfortable repose. When trees serve for supports, ample provision should be made to prevent injury to the bark, by means of stout canvass or heavy bagging between the ropes to which it is suspended and the bark.

SLEEPY TOM.

His 21-4 Heat on Thursday—How His Driver Talks to Him. Chicago Times. When the word "go" was given for the third heat "Sleepy" suddenly awoke to the fact that there was business on hand, and he buckled into his work with such will as to leave all his competitors far to the rear. He came in an easy winner his previous balks, had concluded they him very kindly. The fourth heat was repetition of the third, with a little "more grasshopper goes for a June bug. Away he flew, faster and faster, as greater and he new, inster and faster, as greater and greater became the distance between him and his followers. But for the fact that the drivers of the other horses whipped up desperately at the close the entire field would have been shut out. "Steepy" Tom is evidently a great horse.

John Splan, the driver of Rarus, by the way, tells

A GOOD STORY about this sightless old fellow. He was asked to drive him in a race at Columbus.
To his surprise he lost the first two keats.
"You don't understand him," said his old driver. You must talk to him. Now, when you come to a turn you must say, 'Turn, Tom,' and when you get on the home-stretch you must say, 'Go, Tom; they are after us.' Say that, and he'll wite."

home-stretch you use the home stretch you have the year after us.' Say that, and not they are after us.' Say that, and not they are after us.' Say that, and not they are after us.' Say that, and not they win.''

Splan said he would try the racket. So, Harles of d. 157 for lear he might forget the formula, he wrote it out, pinned it on his knee, "right Vianams 154 hanses 154 louis race.'' so as to have it under his eye as he sat in the sulky, and started on the third heat. It is needless to say he won it. Be the above fact or fiction, this much is certain, that Tom and his this much is certain, that Tom and his driver are on very intimate terms, and driver are on very intimate terms, and driver are on very intimate terms, and driver are forward and talks to his when the second of the control page 154 for the second of the control page 154 for the second of the control page 155 for the control page 1

The seal of commonness, the stamp of vulgarity, written upon the greatest number of physiognomies we meet with, is chiefly accounted for in the fact of the entire subjection of the intellect to the will consequently the impossibility of grasping things except in their relation to the in dividual self. It is quite the contrary with the expression of men of genius, or richly endowed natures, and herein conrichly endowed natures, and herein consists the family likeness of the latter throughout the world. We see written on their faces the emancipation of the intellect from the will, the supremancy of mind over volition; hence the lofty brow, the clear contemplative glance, the occasional look of supernatural joyousness we find there, in perfectkeeping with the pensiveness of the other features, notably the mouth.

No sketch of gambling in Leadville, or tended to. Leave erders at elsewhere, for that matter would be com-plete without allusion to poker. Everybody plays poker, and it is generally 'penny ante." Tall stories are told of the 'raises" which rich and obstinate men have changed hands in an evening. There was a quiet game at the Clarenden only a few nights ago. Luck ran pretty evenly for an hour or two and nobody made or lost work.

At last there came a "big blind." Two of the players "went out" at the earliest opportunity. The other two "stayed in" and elevated each other until there was $80 on the table. One of them said, "Well, if this is to be a money game, I guess I will raise you $500." The man opposite smiled blandly, and observed, "See your $500; go you $500 better." The first speaker took a long look at his cards and said, "I call." The "hands" were laid down when it appeared that the caller had a "pair of fours" and his opponent an "ace high."—Correspondence of the Providence Journal.

en years my wife was confined to ments that no doctor could tell what was the matter or cure her, and I used up a small fortune in humbing stuff. Six months ago I saw a U.S. flag with Hep Bitters on it, and I thought I would be a fool once more. I tried it, but my folly proved to be wisdom. Two bottles cured her, and she is now as well and strong as any man's wife, and it only cost me two dollars. Be ye like foolish."—H. W., Detroit, Mich.
